House Unit Clears Tax Bill Proposed Law Would Give Americans Overseas More Special Deductions Than Senate Measure

By Robert C. Siner

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (IHT) — The House Ways and Means Committee late yesterday adopted a comprehensive revision of the taxation of Americans abroad, including a series of special de-ductions and an income exclusion for those out resident in Western Europe or Canada.

An amendmeot, offered by Rep. Bill Frenzel, R-Minn, which would have extended the exclusion to Americans working in Western Europe and Canada, was defeated on a voice vote.

The measure would also defer the Section 911 (foreign income) provisions of the 1976 Tax Reform Act for income earned in last year, with the new law to take effect for income earned in this year and thereafter. The bill is virtually the same as that worked out by a Ways and Means subcommittee headed by Rep. Joe Waggonner, D-La., early last mooth and is based mainly on proposals put forward by the Tax Fairness Committee, a lobbying arm of the construction industry.

After the vote. Robert Gants, director of the Tax Fairness Committee, said he was extremely grati-fied by what he called a major milestone toward restoration of tax equity for Americans working abroad. But be warned that the fight is not yet

The bill will now go to the House, where spon-sors reportedly are going to ask that it be brought up under the "closed rule," meaning that debate will be limited to one hour. If it is approved there, it must go to conference with the Senate, which voted out its own version io May.

The Senate bill, developed by Sen. Abraham Ribicoff. D-Conn., would replace the current income exclusion with special deductions for housing, cost-of-living and education.

The Ways and Means measure includes these special deductions, although with a few extra deductions, It cootains an income exclusion with a cost-of-living escalator — although the exclusion can not be taken by Americans living in Western Europe and Canada — a home-leave deduction, an increase in the deduction for moving expenses, expansion of the time limits for reinvestment of the proceeds from the sale of a principal residence and expansion of Section 911, which excludes from income housing and meals provided to an employee on the business premises of an employer.

An amendment, proposed by Rèp. Fortney Stark, D-Calif., which would have substituted the Ribicoff bill for the Waggonner measure, lost 28 to 9. The one amendment that was accepted would

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (WP) — At the heart of the nation's capital, sear Washington's bustling Dupont Circle, is the apparently temporary adquarters of an international campa n to desiadilize the CIA. The new publication, which is expected to appear roughly six times a year, is called the Covert Action Information Bulletin, and its tone is uncompromising. Urgiog a worldwide effort to print the name of anyone who works abroad for the CIA, Mr. Agee advises readers of the first issue not to stop there. Once the names have been made public, he recommends: "Then organize public demonstrations against those named both at the American emhassy and at their homes - and, where possible, bring pressure on the government to throw them out. Peaceful protest will do the job. And when it doesn't, those whom the CIA has most oppressed will find other ways of lighting back."

Mr. Agee concludes: "We can all aid this struggle, together with the struggle for socialism in the United States itself."

Yasser Arafut agreed to seek a negotiated settlement with Israel. This policy was bitterly opposed by the "rejection front" of hard-line Palestinians, who are supported by Libya, Southern Yemen and, most actively, Iraq.
Fueling the conflict for control of PLO policy is the rivalry be-tween Iraq and neighboring Syria, which is critical of Egyptian peacemaking, but keeps its own eventual bargaining optinn open with Israel while maneuvering for dominance in the Arab Levant. In addition, personal power struggles in Iraq appear to have contributed to the current international outbreak of inter-Arab violence.

The underground war suddenly is erupting everywhere. The latest phase started with a grenade attack last week on the Iraqi ambassador in London. In quick succession, Palestinians stormed the Iraqi embassy in Paris, machine-gunned the Iraqi ambassador's car in Beirut. assaulted the Iraqi consulate in Karachi. In Lebanon, the refugee camps bave been the theater all week nf a bloody crackdown by Mr. Arafat's el-Fatah guerrillas on Iraqi-backed splinter groups, nota-bly the faction led by Abul Abbas. according to well-informed tra-velers from Beirut.

Moderates Murdered

PLO representatives have been murdered in London, Kuwait and Paris - all of them, men personally loyal to Mr. Arafat's comparatively moderate political line, both in Arab politics and in seeking a compromise with Israel.

The PLO blames the murders on dissident Palestinian guerrilla, Salah Banna, code-named Abu Nidhal, and accuses Iraq's Ba'ath-ist regime of abetting his terror campaign. In return, officials in Baghdad say the attacks on Iraqi diplomats are the work of the PLO. which is trying to intimidate Iraq because Abu Nidhal eludes the PLO's own gunme

The inter-Arab liquidations are particularly surprising because the PLO - scarred by memories of the fratrical Arab feuds which belped the Zionists defeat the Palestinians originally -- has generally sbunned internecine bloodletting and followed the slogan "all guns against the enemy." The murderous Black September, set up by Fatah, claimed Arab victims in revenge for the Palestinian defeat in Jordan, but the PLO bas avoided, often at political cost, bloodshed in its own

However, Abu Nidhal, 40, a Gaza-born Palestinian represents a new type of threat to Mr. Arafat's policies. First, he has been willing to defy the code of "live-and-letlive" which enabled Mr. Arafat to coexist, for instance, with doctrinaire Marxist Georges Habash of the Popular Front for the Liber ation of Palestine.

Abu Nidhal's desperation with Fatah, fled to Baghdad and then was condemned to death by Fatah for a conscience of the West Fatab for a conspiracy on the life of Mr. Arafat which ended in a shontout in the Beirut streets — reflects the extremists' conviction that the PLO bas gradually prepared itself for key concessions in order to make an Egyptian-pioneered peace with Israel one

Abu Nidhal is also a threat because - unlike the other rejection front leader, Georges Habash, wbo is a Communist and a Christian and proponent of revolution throughout the Arab world — be is a member of Fatah, a Moslem and not a revolutionary. Abu Nidhal as- arrived. pires less to change the course one day of the Palestinian struggle than to usurp Mr. Arafat's place soon. Bebind this inter-Palestinian struggle, Iraq is pursuing a similar "extremist" gamble against Syria. The struggle between the two Ba'athist regimes has become more intense as a result of the Lebanese civil war, which frustrated the hopes of Arab radicals of seizing power in a confrontation state with Israel, blocked Iraq's aim of gain-ing a foothold in Lebanon on Syria's western borders and brought the PLO back into Syria enthusiastic about Mr. Sadat's go-it-alone approach toward Israel. They were irritated initially by his sudden decision to go to Israel, but later said they would not oppose his efforts if they produced results.

Israeli Inflation Believed Principal Threat to Begin

At least publicly, the Carter administration has asserted that, despite Mr. Sadat's rejection of direct talks by the foreign ministers, his initiative was not dead.

"An abdication by the United States of its responsibilities in our region would almost certainly lead to a crisis of confidence and would open the gates to destructive rivalries among other major powers which will inevitably affect important American interests everywhere," be said. He cited the security of Australia and India.

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrns Vance responded by talking about the economic issues that the Carter administration wants to be the focus of the conference. He said the United States would cooperate with ASEAN in meeting its economic development goals. The nations are seeking easier access to U.S. markets.

White House Quickly Relocates Fired Friend of House Speaker

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP) — The White House today announced a $50,000-a-year job, with duties still to be defined, for Robert Griffin, a distressed friend of House Speaker Thomas

White House spokesman Rex Granum said that Mr. Griffin would become "special assistant" to Robert Strauss, one of President Carter's top advisers. Mr. Griffin was fired from the No. 2 spot in the scandal-ridden General Services Administration last week, after which Rep. O'Neill severed relations with President Carter's chief congressional lobbyist, Frank Moore.

Mr. Granum said that Mr. Griffin, 61, had accumulated "a wealth of experience in the federal government" during his 35 years in the GSA, which administers federal buildings and supplies. He said that Mr. Griffin was an excellent manager.

In response to questions, Mr. Granum was unable to say what in Mr. Griffin's background gave him special competence in interna-tional trade negotiations or in fashioning federal anti-inflation policy, the two areas for which Mr. Strauss is responsible. Mr. Granum conceded that the job did not exist before. He said it was needed because of the "ever-expanding responsibilities" of Mr. Strauss. Earlier today, the White House directly and Rep. O'Neill indirectly confirmed that the speaker was refusing to deal with Mr. Moore.

Mr. Griffin, a longtime friend of Rep. O'Neill and his choice to head the GSA, was fired from the second-ranking post in the government housekeeping agency after a series of disagreements with the administrator, Jay Solomon.

Although the censored document did not specify who Mr. Byers said had made the payoff to Ray, gov-ernment sources said that he had identified the man as John Kauffmann, a former stockhroker who died in 1974. Mr. Byers last week confirmed to The New York Times that he had told the committee that Kauffmann and a Missouri lawyer had offered him $50,000 to arrange that he turned the offer down.

Ray Payoff Reported

But the documents released yes-terday showed that in 1973, Mr. Byers told an FBI informant that one of these men was the person who paid James Earl Ray after the murder of Dr. King on April 4, 1968. Ray is serving a 99-year sen-tence in Tennessee for the killing.

The bureau memorandum said: During the fall of 1973 ... Beyers [the name was misspelled] talked freely about himself and his business, and . . . told a story about visiting a lawyer in St. Louis County, now deceased, not further identified, who had offered to give him a contract to kill Martin Lu-ther King."

Corroboration Not Evident

There is no indication that Mr. Byers presented any corroboration of the charge that Kauffmann paid Ray. The memorandum notes: "Sometime later... this individual advised... that Beyers truly is very treacherous guy, cautioning him to stay away from him if he wanted to stay out of trouble."

In an interview with a New York Times reporter on July 18, Mr. Byers confirmed that he met with John Sutherland, a patent lawyer from Imperial, Mo., and Kauffmann, a one-time stockbroker, in late 1966 or early 1967 and that they offered him $50,000 to murder Dr. King. He did not disclose in the interview that he believed that Kauffmann actually paid Ray after the crime.

Both Mr. Sutherland and Kauffmann are dead and their widows have said that they did not believe that their late husbands would have become involved in such a plot. Mr. Byers told this story in 1968 and again in 1973.

The FBI did not investigate the report or even interview Kauff-mann about it. Bureau spokesmen have said that the allegation did not receive proper dissemination within the bureau.

The report was discovered last March and turned over to the House committee. It was the lead that first directed their investigators to Mr. Byers.

Testimony Uncovered

An inquiry by the Times has un-covered court testimony that Kauffmann was smuggling amphe-tamine powder into the Missouri State Penitentiary, where Ray was serving a robbery sentence, in 1966. According to some accounts of Ray's activities, he was receiving money from the sale of drugs in prison. It is from this penitentiary that Ray escaped a year before Dr.

King's death. Kauffmann was tried and convicted of selling about 100,000 ampbetamine capsules to federal gents in 1967.

The House committee is racing prepare this material as a base for questions at public hearings scheduled for Aug. 14. Ray, who is imprisoned at the Tennessee State Penitentiary at

Crane of Illinois

Conservative Legislator Enters Presidential Race

By Peter Barnes

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (WP) — Lashing out at "confiscatory taxation and excessive regulation," conservative Rep. Philip Crane, R-Ill., yesterday officially entered the 1980 presidential race.

He became the first candidate to announce. He acknowledged that he may have set a record for early entry into a presidential campaign.
"Lacking name recognition.

have 10 start early," Rep. Crane, 47, said. "As President Carter demonstrated, it's important to hreak out of the pack early." Mr. Carter entered the 1976 race in December, Rep. Crane denied that he was a stalking horse for former California Gov. Ronald Reagan, his political idol, hut admitted that, "If he were an announced candidate, I would not be making this announce-

Rep. Crane said, however, that he would not discourage Mr. Reagan or former President Gerald Ford from seeking the Republican nomination. In case of a conservative split, Rep. Crane said he had made a pledge to Mr. Reagan "that I would not permit my candidacy to let a candidate win the nomination who does not represent the 1976 party platform."

'Commitment to Future'

Flanked by his wife and eight children, and standing under a por-trait of George Washington, Rep. Crane made his announcement in a crowded Senate meeting room. He called his candidacy "a commitment to our future, a restoration of the American dream to its proper custodian - the American people." He promised to enter all 36 state primaries and said that he had already begun raising campaign funds. As chairman of the American Conservative Union and a strong campaigner for conservative causes, Rep. Crane has huilt solid sup-port in the right wing of the Repub-lican Party.

He helped lead the campaign to rally opposition to the Panama Canal treaties and has urged a tougher stance in arms control negotiations with the Soviet Union. An analysis of 1977 voting records hy the National Taxpayers Union showed that Rep. Crane was the most frugal member of the House on government spending.

Rep. Crane's natural constituency may be split among several candidates, however, with Mr. Reagan and the 1976 vice presidential nom-ince, Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas. wooing conservative backers while Illinois Gov. James Thompson divides support from that state.

'Not in Opposition'

"I do not view my candidacy as in opposition to the candidacy of of my fellow Republicans, Rep. Crane said yesterday. "I've never campaigned against anyone, but only for what I helieve in."

Rep. Crane was elected to Congress in 1969 in a special election. He had previously taught at the University of Indiana and Bradley University. Mercy Boat Aids Vietnamese Refugees

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some-where in the South China Sea, a refugees have landed in Thailand, converted Navy landing ship is Malaysia, the Philippines, In-doing a joh that no government the control of the least 12 most of

It is waiting for fishing boats with Vietnamese refugees. Then its crew may treat a sick child or provide food until it can send the craft on its way — to any place that will let the boat people land. On the mercy ship, they wonder whether the refugees will make it.

"Officially, we couldn't tell them what direction to take or sum what direction to take, or even point them the right way," explains W. Stanley Mooneybam, president of World Vision Internacional, the bumanitarian organization that chartered the landing ship to use as a floating aid center for Vietnamese boat people.

"The neighboring countries barely tolerate our activities because they are unhappy about accepting the refugees," he said. "There seems to be a conspiracy against the boat people. It is ludicrous that human life is held so cheaply."

Carter Orders Rescue

Since the World Vision ship began its $50,000-a-month mission early last month, President Carter has ordered U.S.-flag carriers to pick up distressed Vieunamese refu-gees. Ship owners are being assured that the United States will take the responsibility for their resettle-ment. No refugees are known to have been picked up yet.

Mr. Mooneyham said that this was a step toward "changing the in-humanity that since 1975 has en-couraged international shipping to pass by Vietnamese refugees without helping them, actions unique in the history of Western civilization."

Lebanon's Phantom Army

It is no great exaggeration to say that all that remains of Lebanon is a would-be president, a would-be cabinet and a would-be army of 650 men.

The would-he government has now sent the would-be army south to the region bordering on Israel to assert, if that is the word. a sovereign presence. It can do so not by the strength of its arms but only with the diplomatic consent of Syria and Israel. The question for them and other interested governments. like our own, is whether this banner is worth raising.

Lehanon has been occupied, though hardly pacitied, for two years. Since its real army disintegrated in the bloody civil war of 1975-76. President Elias Sarkis has been forced to mancover in the narrow spaces left him by a virtually permanent force of Syrians, a visiting and perpetually threatening force of Israchs and assorted groups of armed domestic rivals. Weak against them all, his government has been weakest in the south, near Israel. where any upset of the delicate balance of forces could precipitate a regional conflict.

The threat of Israeli intervention kept the Syrians out of the area, leaving a no-man's land in which private Palestinian and Christian armies held sway. After the Israeli invasion of the region last spring. Palestinian activities were brought under some control. But when the Israelis withdrew in favor of a United Nations force, they made certain that Christians would be left in charge of the bor-

And it is in those enclaves that troops loval to Sarkis and Premier Selim al-Hoss are currently trying to proclaim a Lebanese national authority. The Israelis should let them. Israel's refusal to let Syrian forces into the border region is understandable.

The Israelis intend first to thwart any operations there by Palestinian guerrillas. They also hope to avoid any permanent toe-to-toe confrontation along the border with Syrian troops. But their own occupation of the region proved that they lack the means to find permanent solution to serve these objec-

The last thing Israel needs is more occupied Arab territory. And the Christian militias will not serve its long-term purposes; although tactically aligned with Israel, their main concern is with Lebanese politics. In the present institutional void, they operate beyond the control of any government. So Israel ought to facilitate the return of a truly Lebanese force, even a military phantom.

The resurrection of a sovereign Lebanon, with which Israel lived in harmony until 1975, should be compatible with Israeli seeurity requirements. A Lebanese military presence in the south should also be more acceptable to Lebanese Moslems and to Syrin than any conceivable alternative. And presumably the symbolic restoration of Lebanese authority in one sector will add to the prestige of President Sarkis and his Beirut government and allow them to begin rebuilding their authority elsewhere. That is a lot of sovereign freight for a battalion of soldiers to carry, but the diplomatic constellations might just be favorable to the effort.

Despite all of Lebanon's suffering, some of the armed extremists, both Christian and Moslem, still dream of a decisive victory. They hope to goad either the Syrians or the Israelis into conflict against their rivals, and they may well succeed. But many Lebanese would prefer to begin working together again and that will be possible only through the restoration of a credible national regime.

The president, a moderate Christian, and the premier, a moderate Moslem, just might become a nucleus for such cooperation if they can rebuild an army. They should be

Nicaraguan Question

It is very well to argue, as some State Department human-rights advocates evidently did. that President Carter risked undercutting the cause by writing a personal letter to Nicaraguan President Anastasio Somoza last month patting him on the back for certain human-rights improvements. Steering another country's social and political change is tricky, and there's room to debate tactical

We note with dismay, however, that word of the letter leaked. The purpose of the leak could not have been to influence the letter, already sent, but apparently just to embarrass the president. A newspaper can hardly bite the hand that feeds it. The leak suggests, nonetheless, this administration's inability. in dealing with its own people, to summon up the loyalty or to enforce the discipline that would let it govern with reasonable efficiency. A president should be able to send a personal letter without worrying that those he eonsults in preparing it will blab.

But we have a further complaint, on the substance of U.S. policy. The letter and the leak are premised on a view of Nicaragua that may be fundamentally wrong: that what the United States is dealing with in Nicara-gua is a human-rights problem. That is the framework in which U.S. policy toward that small and dependent country has come to be taken as symbolic of whether the administration is "serious" about buman rights.

But what the United States is really dealing with in Nicaragua, or so we increasingly suspect, is a revolution. It is comforting to think that the aging dictator Somoza will somehow fade away and be replaced in the scheduled 1981 elections by moderate democrats friendly to the United States. Such is the polarization and violence now building, however, that President Somoza may be forced out in an explosion well before 1981 and replaced not by centrist democrats but by elements beholden to the guerrillas of the Sandinista National Liberation Front. A "second Cuba" in Central America? It is not out of the question.

For Mr. Carter to write Gen. Somoza as though the question were now to manage a process of gradual and peaceable change seems beside the point. He would do better to figure that the imminence of a major upheaval requires an urgent diplomatic initiative, one meant to help bring representative popular government to Nicaragua before that possibility is preempted by escalating violence. An argument over U.S. policy toward Nicaragua is essential, but it ought to be on the right question.

New Biology: Boon or Bane?

The birth in England of a normal, healthy baby girl conecived in a laboratory but brought to term in the body of the mother represents a major scientifie achievement. The birth of the baby raises new bope for couples who have been denied parenthood through some physical incapacity of the wife. It also raises a variety of religious and moral questions, which theologians and scientists are niready debating.

Apart from the theological objections, other questions bave been raised involving legal and etbical issues. Usually several embryos are involved in the new technique; what happens to those not used, are they merely "washed down the sink?" And what about resort to the technique by unmarried couples or by proxy mothers? The implications which the new technique holds for legal as well as moral controversy are manifold.

On balance, the new scientifie breakthrough will be judged as other scientific discoveries and technological accomplishments are judged, upon the basis of bow they are used. Nuclear fission has made possible the destructive power of the bydrogen bomb as well as the many peaceful uses of the atom. Airplanes which can wreck cities and destroy lives also perform missions of mercy. Fire, which warms our bodies and cooks our food, can injure and kill when out of control.

In sbort, the new technique of artificial conception and embryo implantation offer the prospect of enhancing buman happiness and improving the quality of life. It also opens the door to grave unhappiness if its power is abused. Whether the new technique is to be boon or bane depends upon bow it is

Bolivia may seem like a two-bit country that the United States can mold in its image. But the Bolivi-ans, understandably, don't see themselves that way. They did not ask to be the administration's prime example of how a military government could hold clean, honest and fair elections and then transform itself into a democratic jewel surrounded by a sea of countries run by military juntas. They did not ask to be Exhibit A in a Carter campaign to change all those military dietatorships into pristine copies of the United States and Western Europe.

All Bolivia decided to do was bold an election earlier this month. It never said it was going to be a fair and honest contest. All it said was that it planned to hold an election just like the others that have been held in recent Bolivian history: probably flawed, probably rigged to help the candidate of those already in power, probably no better than the elections that used to be held in Chicago during Mayor Richard J. Daley's heyday.

Opportunity

But U.S. diplomats here and State Department human-rights advocates back in Washington decided that Bolivia provided a golden opportunity to demonstrate that the administration's human-rights policy could succeed. To encourage the process in Bolivia, the United States promised increased aid to a democratically elected government and praised to the heavens the old military government of Gen. Hugo Banzer, which called for the elec-tions that were held on July 9. Not so long ago, had Bolivia decided to have an election, the White House would have sent the CIA in to make sure that the right candidate won. To its credit, the Carter administration did no such a thing: It simply said that is wanted the elec-tion to be clean.

But when the military decided to ensure that its candidate, Juan Pereda Asbun, won the contest, U.S. diplomats swung into action. They cajoled and threatened and promised all kinds of things if only the obvious fraud that was under way in the Pereda's behalf was stopped before the final election results were announced.

The United States was once again involved in the domestic affairs of one of its client countries. While the motives were certainly more noble, the end result was the same: The great power to the north was trying to influence the way Bo-livians take care of choosing their

Out the Window

Clearly, the whole think backfired. Instead of persuading Pereda to clean up the act before it was too late, the Bolivian Air Force began an insurrection that Pereda decided he had better be leading. To the great dismay of the United States, Pereda overthrew Banzer and took power for himself. The hope for new election results went out the

The Carter administration now is considering how it should respond. An aid cutoff is under consideration while the human-rights groups back in Washington are demanding that Ambassador Paul H. Boecker be recalled. All of this is designed to show Bolivia that it can't get away with thwarting the adminis-tration's grand plan. Bolivia is going to have democracy whether it wants to or not.

The most difficult thing to ex-plain is that two of Bolivia's three major opposition parties are willing to live with Pereda as president. The two political parties are satisfied that Pereda will eventually call elections, prohably in 1980, which will give them enough time to reor-ganize. They know they lost the July election even if Pereda got more votes than he should have hecause of fraud.

But Jimmy Carter is becoming smaller than life. The laughter once rooted in traditional defiance of authority seems now to be based on pervasive contempt. The momentum of derision, unimpeded by the braking effect of a diehard chorus is leading to the crumhling of a presidency. Can a Fatty Be Elected President?

By Daniel S. Greenberg

WASHINGTON — Writing from Boskon in the British weekly New Scientist, a visiting journalist, Colin Tudge, recently expressed astonishment at "the sheer bulk of so many Americans," who, he said, "have passed through wild, he said, mave passed through mere roundity into a kind of blockmess, as if the Almighty fig-ured that if he squared off the curves, he could fit more people in." Noting that "fat, pounds and pounds of it, flops like porridge into the trouser legs." Tudge on pudge added that "whole families of stupendous fatties jostle into restaurants, like barrels on a truck [and] dwarf the tiny tables. The Americans are fat the way the bushmen are thin."

Picking up where that de Tocqueville of adiposity leaves off, it is clear that he was gazing upon the ordinary citizenty rather than the rulers of our society, for, if any single factor signals who's on top and who's on bottom in this country, it is that power and physical lumpiness are inversely related. Or, to put the matter succinctly: No fat man can be elected president of the United States. In this we have what is perhaps our last permissible bigory, irrational as it may be giv-en the fact the political talent is evenly distributed among the slim and the plump.

Not Since Taft

The principle extends down from the pinnacle of politics. Thus, out-side of opera and wrestling, there is little obesity in the high-visibility professions in the United States. We haven't had a fat president since William Howard Taft's 300 or so pounds occupied the White House; nor, with an exception here and there, do we find much chub in the Congress or in the upper ranks of major corporations. The public has been conditioned not to expect leadership from anyone with but-tocks too bountiful. Is it because excess bulk suggests an mability to exercise self-denial? Perhaps. But apart from matters of poundage, we don't demand that our leaders demonstrate asceticism in other aspects of life.

Ours is a culture that, under du-bious standards of health and beauty, has defied thinness to the point where impressionable youngsters sometimes die in quest of it, while their elders try to subsist on supposedly thinning chemical mixes that can be lethal. Perhaps the one basic agreement in this highly con-tentious society is that thin is better. The clothiers proclaim the ultimate in egalitarianism: "One size fits all." But no one's fooled by that. Following the generally uniamented departures of Bert Lance and Belia Abzug, there are very lew portly people left in public office, though any sidewalk survey quickly. though any sidewalk survey quickly establishes that there are many of them in the general population. The cult of leanness, however, exists in a country that excels all others in promoting caloric ingestion. "All you can eat," which can be s gastrointestinal disaster, is an undisguised invitation to gluttony that is sweeping the restaurant business. The booming quick-food industry thrives on "Whoppers" and "Big Macs." Thanksgiving the one national holiday taken seriously by Americans of virtually every political, ethnie and religious flavor, is routinely associated with overindulgence. And if the purchase of $100,000-a-minute TV advertising time is any clue to the tur-moil in U.S. stomachs, dietary intemperance is a runaway epidemic.

Joggers

The joggers and calorie counters of the jogger all the attention, but as national washing surveys of calorie intake and administration of the surveys of calorie intake and taken and take poundage clearly show, it's the short trenchermen who predominate in the short the rank and file of the U.S. people. 34 141 Thus, the National Center for which the statistics recently reported transmit that in the decade since 1962, the 34 per average adult male in this country was a second put on six pounds, while average the heights remained essentially the beautiful. same. About 200,000 Americans now carry the battery-powered beart regulators. Although the researchers declined to speculate on how many received them needlessly. they said many doctors install them in persons who are relatively healthy but show presumed signs of later heart trouble.

The report, published in today's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine, says that doctors bave misread these signs and put pa-cemakers in patients who stand little risk of serious illness.

One-Third Malfunction

The National Heart and Lung Institute says about one-third of all pacemakers malfunction, requiring additional surgery.

Dr. McAnuity said some doctors routinely install pacemakers in patients whose natural heart-rhythm systems bave malfunctioned. This disorder, called bundle-branch block, occurs when one of the mus-cles that carries electrical impulses to the heart's pumping chambers becomes damaged. Ordinarily, the victim suffers no pain and lives normally.

However, some doctors believe this disorder can lead to complete heart block. When this happens, all messages from the body's natural pacemaker fail to get through. The heartbeat slows, resulting in dizzi-ness, fainting or sudden death.

Although Gen. Numeiri remains a dictator with absolute powers, political analysts believe that the opposition now comprises about 40 percent of the Assembly.

Former dissidents have won 20 to 30 seats in the 450-member central committee of the Sudanese Socialist Union, the country's only legal party. And the man who led the Anya Nya guerrillas of the south during a 17-year war against the Khartoum government, Gen. Jo-sepb Lagu, is oow the elected presi-dent of the Southern Regional Executive Council.

Fragmented Opposition

Gen. Numeiri's longtime supporters, who suddenly find themselves competing for jobs, influence and political offices, complain that the unity drive has moved too fast, and they ask what the rewards of loyalty are.

Some Arab northerners remain resentful of the favors and regional autonomy bestowed on the black and Christian south in Gen. Numeiri's effort to beal the wounds of the civil war.

Gen. Numeiri's preference for re-coociliation is both pragmatic and idealistic. He had long been eager to legitimize his government, and observers believe that he feels more secure with his opponents at bome where be can watch them. The return of some dissidents

A Glimpse of Virginia Woolf's Tragedy

By Thomas Quinn Curtiss DARIS — There is rising French enthusiasm for contemporary English literature. The past Parisian season has witnessed Simone Benmussa's "Albert Nobbs," derived from George Moore; two adaptations of Patricia Highsmith tales; a collection of Katherine Mansfield stories; Molly Bloom's soliloquy from Joyce's "Ulysses;" and at the moment Roman Polanski is filming "Tess of the D'Uber-villes." not in the Hardy country, hut with Brittany and Normandy as its Wessex scene,

More ambitious than any of these has been the manly efforts of Les Athevains, a courageous young company, to disull a play from the life and writings of Virginia Woolf and to act it at the Theatre Ohlique. There are authors who lend themselves to dramatization. W. Somerset Maugham. Hilaire Belloc and W.H. Auden might possihly tempt the playwright's pen, but what dramatist would not fear Virginia Woolf?

That she was a curious personality and an influence on creative writing is incontestable, but there is no more a play in her than there is in "The Anatomy of Melancholy."
Furthermore, the selections from her biography and oovels that Monique Dabre and Anne-Marie Lazarini have arranged omit much that might have given the portrait variety and extended dimension. They permit a glimpse of her writing style and a glance at the unhapwoman behind the writing, but they fail to penetrate beneath the surface image. Her hackground, one of ecormous intellectual riehness, remains a blank, and the hack-hiting battles that raged in the London bohemia of her heyday, which would have gingered the pro-ceedings amusingly, have been

She affected a detachment from all that went on beyond her cloisiered circle. Her exquisite appreciations of Sterne, Hakluyt, Pope and Conrad are models of refined criticism, hut in judging many of her contemporaries she had a sharp toogue and a harsh pen. Her first reading of Joyce's "Ulysses" repelled her, and in the early 1920s she announced that the works of Wells, Bennett and Galsworthy were "already chill" and "we are tremhling oo the verge of one of the great ages of English literature."
We seem to be still tremhling.

In her novels she concentrated almost exclusively on the subjective, recording the thoughts that flitted through the minds of her characters, but the characters themselves themselves are vague. On the printed page they are tantalizingly evasive, but quite fascinating. Behind the footlights only fragments of their conversations remain as in the extracts that Les Athevains have gathered.

Virginia Woolf had a pathological dread of hostile comment on her work. A had review would wound her so deeply that she would be physically ill When still a child, grew up a lonely girl. Prince Mirsky, her acquaintance during his English exile and a transparent third-rater, returned to mous friends, among them Hardy, Stevenson, Ruskin, James Bryce, and George Meredith, who was dling capitalistic narcotics, she was horrified instead of laughing. There were certainly many dramatic events in her career - as Quentin Bell's excellent, exhaustive biography informs us — hut few are fitted for theatrical interpretation. Deliberately withdrawn, experiencing her high moments in the realm of intellect, her tragedy is not the stuff for the stage.

Les Athevains, defining their vohicle as "lecture imaginaire avec Virginin Woolf," have been unable to devise a satisfactory play from a vast library of reference. However, their attempt, defective as it is in theater performance, may win Virginia Woolf new readers.

Sexual Aids a Financial Mainstay

Big Advertisers Eluding Gay Magazines

By N.R. Kleinfield

NEW YORK (NYT) - Many people still would not dream of reading them in public. They are often sent through the mail in plain brown wrappers. Advertisers tend to chuckle about them nervously. Little wonder, then, that when Daads have gone from nothing to roughly a third of all advertising. vid Goodstein gets around to writing a book on The Advocate, he says he intends to call it, "Out of the Porn Stores." The Advocate, which Goodstein owns, is a homosevual newspaper.

Adult boukstores used to be the only place to get such publications. Many are still sold there.

Often, however, you can wander down to your newsstand and find homosexual periodicals alongside Playboy, Newsweek, and Better Homes and Gardens. Flip through them, and increasingly you can find ads of general interest along with the sexually oriented ads.

Desleazified

"Yes, we've come a long, long ay," Goodstein said. "We are being desleazified."

The number of homosexual periodicals (as distinguished from hard-core pornography) is now soaring along with the proliferation of the so-called gay movement. The Gay Task Force puts the number of full-fledged papers and magazines at 50. The homosexual organization does not include in its count numberiess newsletters dashed off on mimeograph machines. Five years ago, there were perhaps half as many homosexual periodicals. They were much less visible - and much less profitable.

The first issue of The Advocate, the largest homosexual paper, was printed secretly in a Los Angeles basement 11 years ago. Its offices today are boused in a richly carpet-ed state in a striking office building in San Mateo, near San Francisco. Circulation is about 80,000 and its

Frontal Nudity

Another financial success Blueboy Inc. of Florida, which in just 31/2 years has become a veritahle publishing empire. The spine of the company is Blueboy, a slick homosexual monthly replete with frontal nudes that says it has a circulation of 180,000, much of it at general newsstands. That would make it the biggest homosexual publication. The company also operates a homosexual mail-order business, publishes eight homosexual paperbacks a month and recently started a more explicit magazine called Numbers, which boasts a circulation of 70,000.

Blueboy's publisher and princi-pal stockholder, Donald Embinder, a former ad manager for TV Guide, says the company should reap revenues of $7 million this year, com-pared with $2.5 million last year. Most of the profits, he says, are poured back into the company. So far, general advertising seems what limited.

One of the fastest-growing homosexual periodicals is Christopher Street Owned hy That New Magazine Inc., it started publishing m New York two years ago with just $10,000. The monthly's circulation is 20,000, but it expects to zoom to 75,000 in November, then 100,000 in January, according to its publisher and editor, Charles Orteb. Right now, the magazine almost hreaks even on revenues of $250,000. Ortleb predicts $1 million in revenues next year.

Christopher Street does not care much for nudity, and it has a dis-tinctively literary bent.

. When they first burst into existence, homosexual periodicals ei-ther carried no ads or relied on local ad purchases from bars and sexually oriented mail-order houses. Ads for sexual aids are still the mainstay of many publications. But the periodicals are scrabbling desperately to sell to Madison Avenue, without which they have little hope of ever becoming much more than financially limited fringe media.

Marketing Advantages

The homosexual periodicals stress what they consider their marketing advantages. They point out that their readers are young educated and well off. Not only do they make good salaries, but they have lots of discretionary income. They do not have wives, they do not have children, they usually do not have mortgages.

Thus fan record and movie companies have been the biggest na-tional advertisers for the homosexual periodicals. Book publishers occasionally push special-interest books. Stereo ads are starting to filter in.

Liquor and cigarette ads are ing pursued, but are proving hard to catch. They are usually found in big-circulation publica-tions. The travel industry has remained aloof.

After Dark has probably hured more general consumer advertising than any homosexual publication. Even though it describes itself as national entertainment magazine, the overwhelming majority of its readers are male and single and the homosexual community regards itself as the audience. Ten years old with a circulation of 72,000, the magazine grosses about $1 million and is profitable, according to Robert Stern, its associate publisher. The Danad Publishing Co. owns it. along with Dance magazine.

Lesbian Publishing

on Cadillac Avenue in Los Angeles is where the Lesbian Tide is published. It is probably the biggest of the smattering of lesbian publications. Jeanne Cordova, founder and sole full-time employee, explains that it began in 1970 as a small newsletter with no ads. Now almost a third of it is ads.

It comes out every other month, shall has a circulation of 8,700 and is sold in 85 bookstores in the United States and eight places abroad. Last year, it had 56 distribution points.

Miss Cordova says the Lesbian
Tide hrings in an extremely modest $16,000 in revenues and hreaks even. It has gotten a few national ads - from book companies for feminist books — and is about to start aggressively pursuing more.

Scholar Finds Poetry the Art Where Women Excel

Although, of course, it is not a book without substance, it is surely all style. The writing is mannered and mandarin, and the language is shaped and fashioned like a bar of silver in the hands of a Cellini.

The book spoofs Oxford ways, romantic passion and practical college living in a mixture that is Beerbohm's own. Sometimes it reads like a cartoon of itself. But its high spirits, classical parody and verbal legerdemain make it the kind of book, as someone said in another regard, that young people read and old people remember.

"Zuleika Dobson" is about the heroine of that name, really a type of chuckleheaded chorus girl, who on a visit to her grandfather, the warden of Judas College, bewitches the entire undergraduate population of Oxford, especially the Duke that could be encompassed only in a classical ballet, the Duke is trapped hy destiny and hy Zuleika into taking his own life, and taking, too, the best part of his school-mates with him. As for Zuleika, she heads for Cambridge, where a new world waits for her to conquer. "Zuleika Dobson" is not a book for every taste. But for those who find it to theirs, it is a book to savor to the very end.

Although oothing of that Jewish cul-ture remains, Shneiderman, a long-time newspaperman, is drawn hack to what does remain. City authorities have ordered the picturseque weekend marketplace to close by September to make way for the project, now the most pas-sionate issue among Bangkok's 4.5 million people. The market has clearly won popular support over the restoration.

For Thais, the market is more valuable as entertainment than as a sbopping center, and the decision to move the market has attracted opposition from the mass media to the tourist board and politicians.

Snake oil, snake meat, live snakes, fighting cocks, live chickens, ehicken parts and chicken soup all are on view and for sale, along with raw cotton, antique looms and cottoo T-shirts with slogans, wood-en furniture and kindling, peace buttons and camouflage army failgues, canned food and can openers, jasmine tea and jasmine flowers.

Thailand's leading journalist and former prime minister, Kukrit Pramoj described the market in a column recently:

"I bought two pieces of boiled ray to eat with [a Thai sauce], a fruit-bearing miniature rose-apple tree, Il white [Thai birds] to release in my compound, six goldfish, four light blue gouramis and some plastic hags of mosquito larvae" to feed the fish.

Bangkok's 200th anniversary will be in 1982, and the city administration wants the historical restoration as part of the celebration. The weekend market is only 20 years old.

But, said Suphawat Phanchet, deputy governor of Bangkok, who functions as a mayor, "The [market grounds] have become dirty and polluted because of the vendors. We want to plant more grass and tamarind trees. We want to make the area look exactly the way it was more than 20 years ago."

W. German Output Stagnates

From Wire Dispatches
BONN, Aug. 3 --- West German industrial production rose a preliminary 0.8 percent last month from May, the Economics Ministry said today. The rise, reflecting stagnation in the first half, was unchanged from the year-ago month. Order inflow to the manufacturing industry was up a preliminary 0.6 percent in June and was up 4.6

Rise of Yen Seen Slowly Affecting Japan Surplus

PARIS, Aug. 3 (AP-DJ) - International economists do not expect any substantial reduction of Japan's current external surplus in the next few months because the gains from the appreciation of the yen lowering import costs are likely to exceed, for a certain period, the expected effects on the volume of

A survey by the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development reiterates that "the large Japanese surplus is an important element of the continuing disequilihria that characterize the world trade and monetary scene, together with the excessive surpluses and deficits of other member

The survey predicts a Japanese current-account surplus of $18 bilbion in calendar 1978, up from $11 billion last year, and a trade surplus of $24 billion, up from $17.3 billion.

"A progressive reduction [of the current surplus] is expected in the course of the coming 12 months, but in the first half of next year it could still be running at an annual rate of around $13 hillion," the study says. It indicates that the role of exchange rates in the adjustment process has posed difficult prob-lems, noting that "the abrupt and sharp" appreciation of the yen in the recent past was one of several disorderly developments worldstrictions of its exports, Based on proposed policies and given the present outlook for world trade and the appreciation of the yen, net external demand is likely to exert a depressive impact on the economy in the 12 months to mid-1979, the OECD says.

Export volume is projected to expand by a modest 3.5 percent in 1978, and Japan may lose some market shares over the next 12 months following the sharp appreciation of the yen and export restraints. The growth of imports is expected to accelerate to an annual rate of more than 10 percent to the second half of this year. However, given the negative carryover from 1977, the year-on-year rise may only be of the order of 4 percent.

As a result, Japan's real GNP growth, which might have exceeded 6 percent at annual rate in the first half of this year, largely due to the sharp acceleration in the first quarter, is projected to decelerate somewhat in the second half. Overall, the growth for 1978 is forecast by the OECD at 5.5 percent, up from 5.1 percent in 1977 but down from nese authorities. During the first half of 1979, GNP growth is ex-pected to decline to 4.5 percent anformed the previously reported pre-liminary 1.7-percent decline in industrial production from April to a 2.5-percent decline. Order inflow figures were not revised, leaving the preliminary 1.2-percent decline from April unchanged. The largest increase was recorded in the investment goods sector. which showed a preliminary rise of 2.8 percent in June from May. The largest decline was posted in food. services, where output was off 5 percent from May, The June seasonally adjusted index, 1970 equals 100, stood at a preliminary 114 against 113 in May (revised down from a preliminary 114) and 114 in June 1977. Since the beginning of the year, the index has stagnated in a range of from 113 (in January) to a high of 115 (to

The upturn in orders was prima-rily attributable to a revival of do-mestic orders, which climbed 2.1 percent from May. Foreign orders were off 0.5 percent. Consumer goods posted the largest upturn, gaining a preliminary 6.8 percent in June, while the order inflow for investment and unfortibled cooling. vestment and unfinished goods remained flat.

In Frankfurt, the Bundesbank announced a preliminary overall balance of payments surplus of 614 million Deutsche marks in June, compared to a deficit of 3,077 billion DM in May and a deficit of 130 million DM in June 1977.

The current account — compris-ing trade, services and transfers method of adjustment would be showed a preliminary surplus of through an expansion of Japan's 2.187 billion DM in June, up from an upward-revised surplus of 771 million DM in May and 447 million DM to June 1977.

Preliminary Surplus

For the first balf, West Germanny recorded a preliminary overall payments surplus of 423 million DM, compared to the deficit of 812 million DM registered to the 1977 half. The current account produced a preliminary surplus of 7.734 bil-lion DM in the first six months compared to a surplus of 4.863 billion DM to the year-ago period.

The swing into surplus to the month to the overall payments and the extremely higher current-account surplus were due largely to the increased June trade surplus of some 4 billion DM, or about 900 million DM above May and 1.1-billion DM above June 1977.

The first-half basic balance comprising current account and long-term capital flows — showed a preliminary surplus of 5.834 billion DM, compared to a deficit of 3.185 hillion DM a year ago.
In other news, the federal labor institute in Nuernberg reported toav that the nun ployed to July was 922,200, or 4.1 percent of the work force, up from 3.9 percent in June, but below 4.3 percent in July 1977.

Anticipated Slowdown Yet to Materialize

Foreign Banks' Slice of U.S. Mart Up

NEW YORK, Aug.3 (AP-DJ) — Theoretical up to now, the question of how much more of the U.S. commercial-loan market share foreign banks can win has accumulated new significance. Foremost among the reasons for the change are:

 Most obviously, a U.S. Senate subcommittee's passage of legislation that would bring increased regulation of the foreign institutions.

 A Federal Reserve Board reckoning that as of April, the total of foreign banks' commercial and industrial loans in the United States was equal to about one-lifth of that at U.S. banks reporting weekly to the Fed, up from 17.9 percent in May

• That reckoning's failure to jibe -- so far, anyway — with a prediction hy Fed staffers last year that foreign banks' business expansion in the United States "will no doubt slow down somewhat from the extremely rapid pace of recent years."

· A surge in direct foreign manufacturing investment in the United States, whose effect on the foreign banks' traditional wholesale business has yet to be gauged.

• A belief among bankers that the next step in the foreign lenders' evolution here is outside the traditional wholesale arena, and into acquisition of retail deposit bases and smaller-company loan portfolios.

Increased Competition

The question of whether foreign lenders have worn out their dual fast-growth track in the com-mercial and industrial loan-market share and vol-ume also has gained importance because of the increased competition for bankers from other sources of corporate financing.

One person who may well bave a sharp perspective on what comes next is Serge Bellanger, who worked for Citibank in France before becoming general manager of Credit Industriel et Commercial's U.S. operation. Mr. Bellanger, who testified recently before a Senate subcommittee considering legislation to such foreign hand activities believes legislation to curb foreign bank activities, believes eign lenders have reached the point U.S. banks did in Europe some years ago, when their initial spurt of new business-gathering subsided to a rate governed more by conditions of whatever national market they were in. According to a recent Fed study, the U.S. offices of foreign banks saw their commercial and industrial dams slightly more than double from $8.8 billion in November 1972 to $17.8 billion in November 1974. By May last year, the total had grown 16.02 percent from the late 1974 mark to $20.6 billion. (Despite the slowdown, foreigners still did better than U.S. weekly reporting banks, whose loans fell during the span.) Rather than moderating further, though, the foreigners' growth rate has picked up. According to the Fed, the forcigners' loans as of April this year were $26 billion, up about 29 percent from the level 11 months earlier — and this during a borlower's months fearlier. rowers market for bank credit. tFrom November 1972 to April this year, total assets of foreign banks' U.S. offices rose from $24.6 hillion to $90

Despite its evident effectiveness thus far, the continuing usefulness of foreign banks' loan-price shaving is being looked at doubtfully by some. The head of international operations at a major New York bank says corporate treasurers appear to be getting more interested in dependable sources of funds than in cheap ones. Similarly, Mr. Bellanger notes that zealous rate-cutting can cause a major customer to wonder about his hank's staying power when its loan-funding costs rise.

Last year's Fed study brought up a potentially ironic effect of the foreign banks' rate competitiveness. It said that although evidence is not conclusive, one result should be "a closer convergence between domestic and Eurocurrency lending rates." Such an effect would be ironic because, by the account of lenders and borrowers alike be differentials between these rates were used by the foreigners in quoting competitive loan charges.

European American Bank & Trust chairman Harry Ekblom points out that domestie and for-eign bankers alike are undercutting the market with loans at below the prime rate or tied to federal funds rates. He does not anticipate any foreignbank disenchantment with rate-shaving soon. Be-sides the fact that overall contention for loan busi-ness dictates it, there is the fact that at newer foreign bank branches, officers know profits will not be stunning in the first few years anyway, and they figure the extra pinch on profit margins well worth the building of a stake in the U.S. market.

Hongkong & Shanghai Banking, National Westminister and Standard Chartered already have moved to acquire stakes in full-service U.S. banks. The U.S. arm of Barclays is reaching even further outside foreign bankers' traditional arena, proposing to acquire a consumer loan company.

Helping the big foreign banks margins has been a better reception in the money market here. New york bankers say the premiums the top foreign names had to pay for lendable funds four years ago are about gone, as is the tier structure of those days — in which European banks had to offer bet-ter rates than U.S. ones to attract certificates of deposit or borrow federal funds, and Japanese tostitutions had to offer more than Europeans.

Mr. Ekblom says that foreign lenders' growth to the United States over several years has diluted a competitive problem cited by some: chauvinism-An officer at a European bank bere notes, for example, that a big U.S. soft drink company's rehuffs of the bank's business solicitations have for years included the explanation that the company preferred to deal with U.S. lenders.

One figure that reflects foreign banks' success with domestic U.S. borrowers is in last year's Fed study. It pointed out that between November 1974 and May last year, while domestic weekly reporting banks' commercial and industrial loan total fell, foreign banks' loans increased by $2.9 billion and that $1.6 billion of the tocrease was to domestic borrwers.

There have been problems for the foreigners in blending into the competitive landscape here. It is not just foreign vs. domestic banks any longer. It is both of them vs. insurance companies, commercial paper, industrial finance and leasing companies. honds and the internal financing many corporations have been able to enjoy.

14 Japanese Banks Lend $500 Million to Britain

LONDON, Aug. 3 (AP-DJ) — A group of 14 Japanese banks is lending the U.K. Electricity Council $500 million for 10 years.

The Treasury, which guaranteed the loan, said it bears interest at 0.5 points above interbank Eurodollar offered rates for the first six years and 0.625 points above for the remaining four years.

The loan is the largest ever put together by Japanese banks for a foreign borrower, and the rates are comparable to an earlier borrowing by the French government. It is repayable in five equal semiannual installments from the eighth anniversary of the drawdown of the funds, the Treasury said. A spokesman said the loan fits in with Britain's debt management strategy which involves stretching out the nation's external debt repayments to beyond the first balf of the 1980's while at the same time achieving a year-by-year net reduction in external debt.

In other news, the Development and Investment Bank of Iran has arranged a $60-million loan at an interest rate which varies at 0.75 points above the interbank Eurodollar offered rates over the

HONG KONG, Aug.3 (AP-DJ)

— Plans for a $300-million credit that would have been Taiwan's largest commercial borrowing collapsed today after government offi-cials and foreign bankers dug in their heels in a dispute over lending

In a highly unusual action, managers of the proposed credit began sending out cancellation notices to about two dozen banks that were planning to participate. The funding package, for Taiwan Power Corp., included two loans — one for $99.7 million and another for $200 million

Moves to unwind the credit came after the managing banks were told the $200-million portion of the transaction would not be approved

Banks Plan To Help SIR Stay Afloat

ROME, Aug. 3 (AP-DJ) — Creditor banks of Societa Italiana Resine (SIR) agreed late today on a plan to salvage the large petrochemical

Under the plan, management of the near-bankrupt company will pass 10 a holding company controlled by the banks. In return, the banks will inject 400 billion lire (about $475 million) of fresh capital into SIR to keep it affoat during its reorganization.

Yesterday, the government pro-posed a bill that would authorize the industry ministry to appoint commissioners to take over large troubled companies such as SIR. Parliament must still approve the hill, hut apparently the banks de-cided to move ahead immediately with the salvage plan so the govern-ment would not have any cause to

The recovery plan for SIR could be used to restructure other Italian corporations, such as Liquigas. Many companies have been virtually paralyzed for months while the political parties, todustrialists, and unions have debated the proper way to aid debt-ridden industries.

The agreement on SIR calls for a moratorium on loan repayments through 1981. SIR has total debts of 1.78 trillion lire and has not paid wages for July. The majority of its debts are owed to the state credit corporation Istituto Mobiliare Itali-ano (IMI), which will control 58 percent of the SIR holding company. Most of the other creditor banks are also owned or controlled by the government.

SIR will receive 120 billion lire of its new capital immediately, assuming that the individual banks approve the accord. Of the total injection of 400 billion lire, half will be provided by issuing new shares of stock, and half by issuing conof stock, and half by issuing convertible bonds. The plan projects that SIR's annual losses will decline gradually from 189 billion lire in 1978 to zero to 1981. Turnover is expected to rise from 800 billion lire this year to 1.9 trillion in 1981. lire this year to 1.9 trillion in 1981.

name or names in which the shares of stock deliverable upon such conversion shall be registered, with the address of the person so named.

From January 1, 1978, through July 25, 1978, the prices of shares of Common Stock of Ashland ranged from a low of $27 to a high of $36 as reported on the Composite Tape for New York Stock Exchange listed securities. The last reported sale price of the Common Stock of Ashland on July 25, 1978, was $36 per share. At the present conversion price of $40 per share, each $1,000 principal amount of Dehentures is convertible into 25 shares of Common Stock of Ashland, which shares had a market value of $900 at the close of business on July 25, 1978. No payment or adjustment will be made upon conversion of Dehentures for interest accrued thereon. If the Dehentures are redeemed on September 8, 1978, the holder of each Dehenture will receive $1,057.36. If the market price of the Common Stock of Ashland were to exceed $42.30 per share at the time of conversion, Dehenture-holders would receive Common Stock upoo conversion having a greater market value than the cash which they would receive upon redemptism. The value of Common Stock of Ashland is subject to change depending on changes in the market value of common Stock.

which they would receive upon redemption. The value of Common Stock of Ashland is subject to change depending on changes in the market value of such Common Stock.

Ashland's Board of Directors has declared a quarterly cash dividend of $.50 per share payable on September 15, 1978 to holders of record of Common Stock on August 14, 1978. Depentureholders who surrender their Depentures for conversion after August 14, 1978, will not receive such dividend. The right to convert Depentures into Common Stock will expire at the close of husiness on September 8, 1978. No further conversion of the Depentures can be made after September 8, 1978. Dependence on the Common Stock will be redeemed at the redemption price (including accrued interest) of $1,057.36 for each $1,000 principal amount of Depentures.

THE PEACESHIP

Henry Ford's Pacifist Adventure in the First World War By Barbara S. Kraft. Macmillan. 367 pp. $14.95. Reviewed by Paul Fussell

THE SCENE at the Hoboken pier on Dec. 4, 1915, was "so grotesque," the New York Sun reported, "as to be almost beyond belief." Henry Ford was sailing to Europe on the Danish vessel Oscar Il to persuade the belligerents to stop lighting, and in his party were 163 hastily assembled pacifists. divines. "lectures," cranks, educators, women's suffragists, Single-Taxers, Sunday-school zealots, Prohibitionists, student observers, and ribald journalists.

Amidst the bedlam, bands played "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," former secretary of state William Jennings Bryan, the naturalist John Burroughs and Thomas Edison went oo board to bless the enterprise and then dashed off again to dissociate themselves from Ford, persuaded that "wer is murder," had anoonuced his ambition of applying moral persuasion to get the boys of Europe out of the trenches by Christmas, and he stood on the bridge and threw roses to the crowd on the pler. As the ship left the harbor to mingled cheers and laughter, one enthusiast threw himself off the dock and swam after it. It was certainly one of the great comic moments in American history, but it was more than comie. The Ford peace expe-ditioo, as Barbara Kraft's sensitive account indicates, was at bottom an admirable, idealistic and humane venture aborted by naivete, administrative ineputtude and profound ignorance of Europe-an history and politics. Its idea is inhereotly no funnier than that of the peace movement that helped end the Vietnam War.

Despite his merits as an engineer Ford was virtually unschooled. He thought 1812 the date of the American Revolution, and, baving heard that Matthew Arnold was a writer, imagined that Benedict Arnold was one too. By offering a munificeot $5-a-day wage at his auto plants, he had become "an instant folk bero." as Barbara Kraft says. "a St. Francis caring for his followers." Appalled both by the well-known wickedness of Europe and the ghastly slaughters of the first six months of the war, in April, 1915. he began to speak out, arguing that the war was against reason, that it had been caused by money-lenders and munitions makers and that the United States, the most powerful of the neutral countries, must stop it. Because President Woodrow Wilson believed no official mediation possible until the belligerents asked for it, Ford decided to see what a private effort could do.

He was set on this course by the most fascinating character of the whole charade, Rosika Schwimmer. a resolute Hungarian pacifist, feminist, and self-publicist. She had, she said, been conferring in Europe with belligerents and neutrals. She carried in her capacious black handbag, she said, written agreements from many of the countries affected that they would welcome an end to the war if someone would only mediate. She persuaded Ford to lead, publicize and pay for the expedition, but she herself gradually wormed her way into total command, and before Ford was finally persuaded to fire her a year later she had brought his venture to ruin. amends. The Washington Post said yesterday that the new contract will pay him about $500,000 over the length of the pact, and quoted sources as saying it is guaranteed, meaning Kilmer will be paid for both years regardless of injury. Kilmer, who will turn 39 on Sept. 4 and is the nldest player on the Redskins, will thus presumably finish his career in

Shue to Coach In San Diego

SAN DIEGO, Aug. 3 (AP) — San Diego's new National Basketball Association club has hired Gene Shue, former Philadelphia and Baltimore coach, who told victory-starved lans of the team that they can expect a winner.

Shue is the NBA's most winning active head coach with a 448-434 career record. But in the league's Pacific Division, San Diego finds itself in a bracket in which every team — Los Angeles, Phoenix, Golden State, Seattle and Portland — had winning seasons last year.

"That's the imjor problem — the unbelievable competition," Shue said Tuesday after San Diegn owner Irvin Levin announced his appointment Levin has not yet named the team.

Rose Roars Back With 4 for 5 After Hitting Streak Is Halted

ATLANTA, Aug. 3 (AP) — Pete Rose denied it, but it seemed as though he was punishing the team that put an end to his 44-game

The Cincinnati Reds third baseman doubled, singled twice and belt-ed a home run in his first four times at the plate to back Tom Seaver's three-hit pitching as the Reds beat the Atlanta Braves Wednesday

"I didn't try any harder tonight than I did last night," Rose said after his 4-fnr-5 outing, "I didn't feel any looser tonight. I hit the ball just as hard last night."

After failing by one game to beat Wee Willie Keeler's National League record consecutive-game hirting streak, the 37-year-old Rose has set his sights on a new goal—the NL batting crown.

"I think I have a chance to win the title," he said. "And you've got to accumulate the hits and add them up." Rose is hitting .318, second to Atlanta's Jeff Burroughs at .321.
Reds Manager Sparky Anderson said Rose's streak didn't have any effect on the team. "We were winning pretty regularly all the time," Anderson said. "These guys have been around a long time and they're pros. They're not affected by that sort of thing."

Rose started off his first game since having to settle for a tie with Keeler with a double. Ken Griffey and Johnny Beach followed with walks and Dave Concepcion cleared the bases with a triple. Seaver, 11-9, kept the Braves off base until Dale Murphy led off the third with his 18th homer of the season. They scored their only other run in the seventh when Burroughs hit his 15th bomer. Rose chased Atlanta starter Preston Hanna, 7-9, with a run-scoring single in the second. Rose started the sixth with a bomer off Craig against Max Leon in the fnurth. Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees set the major league consecutive-game bitting record of 56 in 1941.

'Son of Cheese'

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK — Here are some force its demands for the delivery of the latest disaster films of Ann-Margret, for whom it har-now in production: "Shells" — A small resort town on the Chesapeake Bay is menaced by a giant oyster lurking in an offshore mud bank. Driven by a primitive urge to create giant pearls, the huge bivalve lures care-tunity to get rich quick, encourage public swimming on the oyster's mud bank until the oyster, sensing that it is being ex-ploited for commercial gain, comes ashore on a high tide to swallow the entire town. Unable to get nff the beach, it is surrouoded by tourists and eaten nn the half shell with ketchup and horseradish sauce.

In the cli-mactic scene, Charlton Heston attempts to deliver the famous actress by winching her down from an inverted helicopter. "Nasty Pasta" — The population of a large Eastern city is suddenly attacked by murderous spaghetti. Having been accidentally subjected to nuclear radiation, the spaghetti has the power to leap off the fork and strangle diners as they lift it to their mouths. bors an intense passion, when Heory Fonda discovers that its power can be destroyed by spraying it with grated Parmesan cheese.

"Ice 2" — This sequel to last year's highly successful "Ice" is hased on the assumption that the vicious iceberg destroyed by Charlton Heston as it approached the George Washington Bridge has a vindictive mother who now wants revenge. Fans of the original "Ice" will be disappointed if they expect anything as exciting as the original's destruction of New Haven by glacial avalanche. Scenes in which mutinous ice cubes flee Olivia De Havilland's refrigerator to join forces with the approaching ice field, however, will make many moviegoers think twice before popping another ice cube into their scotch.

"Aerosol" — Shelley Winters picks up her aerosol hair spray, touches the nozzle and is instantly sucked into the can. As it consumes Heston, Paul Newman, Olivia DeHaviland, James Stewart and 12 people of varying backgrounds, the cheese swells to prodigious size. Fortunately, Henry Funda is on the job. "If we sprinkle it with some grated Parmesan" someone suggests, "maybe we can cut it down to size." Fonda has a better idea. "We'll just cut it up into 90 million little pieces and put a piece in every house" he says. People would rather have small cheese free than colossal cheese at

'Fun' science and mathematics books are selling well even in general interest bookstores, and they are on the verge of becoming big business.

Calculus in Comics, My Little Chickadee

By Malcolm W. Browne NEW YORK (NYT) — Leapin' limits, Dr. Leihniz, a calculus comic book? Yes, and a coloring book explaining computer programming, a physics lesson hased on Frisbee flying and a children's primer about special relativity. Producing a growing list of de-ceptively lighthearted books, sci-entifie educators are trying to engage America's interest in fundamental and sometimes difficult scientific conceptions.

A few years ago their efforts were limited to mimeographed manuscripts circulated privately to college classes. But today, publishers say, "fun" science and mathematics books are selling well even in general interest bookstores, and they are on the verge of becoming hig husiness.

This is no fad, but a permanent trend in scientific educa-tion, the authors maintain. Among them is Dr. Jearl Walker of the physics department of Cleveland State University and author of "The Flying Circus of Physics."

"The standard, boring academic texts of the past are just nnt going to sell in the next decade. Furthermure, in the post-Sputnik era, fewer and fewer stu-dents are going in for science and math. We've got to do something to bring them back."

Popular science books in themselves are nothing new, but a modest revolution in publishing has followed the appearance of a large, paperback book cost-ing $7.95 called "Prof. E. McSquared's Original, Fantasoc and Highly Edifying Calculus Primer.

The book is by Dr. Howard Swann, a mathemaocian at San Juan State University in California, and careful study of it yields an introduction to the fundamental of calculus.

To get z in both guaranteed intervals means we have to try;

Ser = min(Seed, Seed) Let's see what happens with this on:

Ock-action the smaller of country of then such x's will satisfy both z - 6 x < 2 + 6 (2nd x /2) and z - 500(x (/2+500)(2nd x /2) at the same time! The guarantees on the and the will both hold, so

L - 毫く(以) < L + 臺 and W - 1 < g(x) < M + 1 will both be true at the same time! Now just add them up and we get L+M-4-4 (1(x)+g(x) < L+M+5+1 or L+M - £ < f(x)+g(x) < L+M+£, which is exactly what we want for "[]+g(]!" This shows that 500) = min(5000 , 5000) is guarantecable!

ists has come from the fact that the calculus primer is in comic book form, and the mathematical concepts in it, some of them profound and difficult, are acted out by cartoon characters.

John Johnson, a cartoonist, depicted the protagonist, Professor McSquared, as a caricature of Swann, the author. The other characters include a pig. some Greek letters, two "function" and a talking beer can named "Good Vibes."

"Good Vibes."

Starting with its opening statement that "calculus is concerned with studying very carefully relationships of the sort that can be put on a graph," the text moves into progressively more difficult ideas. George Washington University. Fortran is an acronym for "for-mula translation" and refers to the special language used by computers. A sample of its prose:

Because computers are so singluarly literal-minded, you must be PAINSTAKINGLY PRECISE in telling them just what you want them to do. The computer will do the dog work, carrying out calculations doggedly, thousands of times if occessary. Unfortunately, you need to tell the computer how to make its decisions and how to figure out what to do not figure out what to do next
